NEW MANAGER OF WESTERN UNION

BEGAN EXPERIENCE WITH THE MORSE KEY DURING THE BOOM OF 1906.

Joe Savant, who took charge of the Tonopah office of the Western Union on Monday, is a product of the rush to southern Nevada. During the Goldfield boom in 1906 he was a messenger in Reno, with only a smattering of acquaintance with the key, but he was a rapid learner and rapidly developed from the student class to an expert operator. The demand for men to dispatch the enormous telegraph business incidental to the period of inflation and high-grade shipments from the southern camps taxed the capacity of the Western Union to the utmost and few men could be found willing to undertake the job of holding down a berth in the Goldfield office.

It was a case of day all day in the daytime and there was no night for the men in all lines of business. The Sullivan Trust company, under the guidance of George Graham Rice, was sending out daily messages embracing tens of thousands of words. Advertising copy was sent out over the wires and the immense full-page ads of that company were changed daily by using the wires regardless of cost. Then there were such other promoters as Patrick, Elliott & Camp, Don Ferguson, Dr. Grant, Joe Hutchinson, G. S. Johnson and 200 brokers, all of whom used the wires to an extent never dreamed of. Only one office was available, as the Postal company had not yet strung its wires into the southern country, and the result was that one fine Sunday morning the Western Union closed its doors on all business to give the exhausted operators a chance to catch a little sleep. They had been working 20 and 22 hours a day and were all done up by the high pressure tension. Promoters and brokers offered big bonuses to operators to have their business taken care of, and the boys are reputed to have coined extra money in this way. One case stands out prominently where $100 was paid a weary operator dragged out of bed after daylight by a firm that had a thousand words to transmit.

It was during this frenzied state of business that Joe Savant, the kid operator, floated in from the placid banks of the Truckee and was instantly precipitated into the maelstrom encircling the Western Union. He held down his job with satisfaction to the company and credit to himself and continued to hold down the situation long after the boom had subsided and business was reduced to normal lines. The training was the best a boy could have to steady him and inspire confidence, and Joe proved that he could always be relied on at any hour of the day or night.

After this experience Joe was appointed manager of the Richmond (Cal.) office, and then was transferred to Vallejo. From the latter place he comes to Tonopah familiar with every detail of the responsibilities he has to assume as manager, and his friends will congratulate him on the promotion.

OPENS NEW LAND OFFICE.

J. E. Robbins, formerly of Ely and now register of the new land office at Elko, formally opened the new district the first of this month by establishing the office in Elko. A ton of records pertaining to lands in the new district were forwarded from the Carson City office to Elko by mail.

TOWNS ISOLATED.

Advises from Reno state that Lakeview, Ore., and neighboring towns are practically isolated on account of the severe washouts on the Nevada-California-Oregon railroad. No train has arrived in Reno over this line since last Tuesday.

SERIOUSLY ILL IN OAKLAND.

Mrs. Cutting, mother of Henry Cutting, is seriously ill at the Richmond apartments in Oakland. Her condition is so grave that the constant attendance of two nurses is necessary.

The forest service collected 40,000 pounds of tree seed last year for use in reforestation work. The total area reforested was about 30,000 acres.

COLLEGE GIRLS HAVE THE BEST EARS OF WOMEN

UNIVERSITY PHYSICIAN SHOWS PHYSICAL DIFFERENCES BETWEEN BOTH SEXES.

BERKELEY, Cal., Jan. 6.—There is a smaller percentage of abnormal ears among women students of the university than among the men, according to the university physician, Dr. George F. Reinhardt, who has just made report to the president's office. The percentage of abnormal chests runs higher among the women, while other abnormalities vary backwards and forwards between the two sexes.

Out of 1172 men entrants to the university examined during the semester upon which report is made there were 683 who had abnormally round shoulders. Out of this same number there were 375 thin men, 25 fat men and 772 of average weight. Of the 276 with abnormal chests there were 160 flat chests. Among the 214 women freshmen with abnormal chests 65 had flat chests. Pigeon chests were more numerous in proportion, among the women than among the men.

Among the women abdominal abnormalities were also greatly in proportion to excess over the men. In the matter of eyes there were many faults to be noticed in both sexes. Simple astigmatism was noticeable in 201 men and 310 women, making the proportion very much greater among the latter. Among the men there were but 14 enlarged thyroid glands and among the women 282. Only 15 out of the more than 2000 students examined had false teeth.

The general development of 88 men and 28 women was found poor; of 425 men and 226 women it was fair; of 644 men and 451 women, good; and of 16 men and 29 women, excellent. The percentage of excellent general development was very much higher among the women than among the men.

Before entering college 62 of the men had fractured their arms; 32 had sprained their ankles; 26 had fractured their clavicles; 16 had fractured a leg and 32 had fractured their noses. Among the women the precollege history showed 23 with fractured arms, 20 with injured backs, 19 with fractured wrists and 11 with fractured ankles. None of the 844 women had broken her nose. Ten had fractured their clavicles and 12 reported falls with more or less injury.
